Allergy injections: They're worth a shot

If you're one of the millions of Americans who have allergies or asthma and are not getting enough relief from sneezing, wheezing, itchy eyes and sinus problems, give allergy injections a shot. Immunotherapy, or allergy shots, can relieve or, in some cases, cure your allergies.

Immunotherapy works by gradually decreasing your sensitivity to your allergy triggers. The treatment uses the body's own natural defenses to reduce overreactions to otherwise harmless substances. Over time the shots can reduce and even get rid of your allergy symptoms.

South Bay Allergy and Asthma can provide a consultation and conduct tests to determine what triggers your allergies and if allergy shots are right for you.

Allergy shots are strongly recommended for individuals with allergic asthma, hay fever and sinusitis. They've proved extremely effective in treating insect sting allergy, thereby preventing potentially life-threatening reactions to insect sting venom.

In addition, studies show that allergy shots may decrease the risk of developing asthma and reduce future allergies.

So don't continue to suffer needlessly. Call 310-371-1388 or visit our website at southbayallergy.com for an appointment.
